"Hello, everyone! My name is Thomas.
I live here on the Island of Sodor with all my friends.
Let's go and meet some of them."

Thomas and His Friends

"Hello!

I'm Sir Topham Hatt,
but everyone calls me
The Fat Controller.

Let's go on a tour of my railway and meet some of my Really Useful Engines."

Thomas

Thomas is a cheeky little blue engine. He gets himself into all kinds of scrapes, but he always puts things right again.

James

Sometimes James can be a little vain; after all, he is the only shiny bright red engine on Sodor.

Gordon

Gordon is the fastest engine on Sodor and likes to boast about it!

Charlie

Charlie is a cheery chap. He loves to have fun, just like Thomas!

Emily

Emily is a very bossy engine who likes to show the other engines how things should be done.

Henry

Henry is a very trusted engine who huffs and puffs his way around Sodor.

Edward

Everybody likes Edward! He's friendly to all the engines on Sodor and has the number 2 on his side.

Harold

Harold the helicopter has whirring propellers that the engines can hear as he flies through the air.

Percy

Percy loves to pull the mail train. He'll do whatever it takes to be Really Useful!

Hiro

Hiro was the first engine on Sodor, and was once called the Master of the Railway.

Toby

Toby is a little tram who is always happy to work with his loyal coach, Henrietta!

Rosie

Rosie is a jolly purple engine. She loves working with Thomas!

Spencer

Spencer has the shiniest paint of all the engines on Sodor. He belongs to the Duke and Duchess of Boxford.

★ Around the Island ★

The Island of Sodor is a busy place indeed! Let's look at some of the places that the engines visit on The Fat Controller's Railway ...

GORDON'S HILL

This is the steepest hill on Sodor. It is called 'Gordon's Hill' because Gordon the Big Engine once got stuck pulling a goods train up it!

TIDMOUTH SHEDS

At the end of a busy day, Thomas and his friends puff back here to share stories of their adventures before going to sleep.

KNAPFORD STATION

Knapford Station is the biggest and busiest station on Sodor. The engines are always chuffing past each other and peeping a friendly "hello!" in this station.

Can you see Thomas?
Is he puffing to Wellsworth or the Airport?

BRENDAM DOCKS

Brendam Docks is home to lots of engines and machines. Cranky is a bad-tempered crane. He spends his days loading and unloading ships and engines here.

Scale
0 5 10 Miles

HENRY'S TUNNEL

Henry once refused to come out of this tunnel because he didn't want the rain to spoil his fine green paint. All the other engines had to use the next track until Henry moved!

THE SODOR STEAMWORKS

The Steamworks is where engines go when they need repairs. It's run by Victor, who is always happy to help. Kevin helps him do the heavy-lifting, too!

★ Hiro Helps Out ★

One day, Hiro puffed into Knapford Station and saw the oddest sight. The Fat Controller was rushing around, red-faced and without his top hat! Hiro was worried.

"Can I help you, Sir?" he asked
The Fat Controller.

"I have a very busy day, Hiro," The Fat
Controller told him.

"I have too much to do and not enough time!"

And with that, The Fat
Controller hurried away.

Just then, Edward puffed into the station looking for The Fat Controller. He had to pick up some visitors from Brendam Docks but he didn't know where to take them!

Hiro didn't want to bother The Fat Controller. He already had enough to do!

"Take them to the Hills, Edward," Hiro said, helpfully.
"They'll like it there."

So Edward puffed away to the Docks and Hiro wheeshed to the Water Tower.

On the way, Hiro saw Thomas. He was going to Knapford to see The Fat Controller about some benches and tables.

"Go and visit your friend, Farmer Trotter, instead," Hiro suggested. "The Fat Controller is very busy now."

So Thomas cheerfully chuffed away to the farm.

On Hiro chugged. As he steamed up to the next junction, he passed Percy pulling a flatbed of ducks.

"I have to find The Fat Controller," Percy said. "He will tell me where to take these ducks for a swim!"

But Hiro still didn't want to bother The Fat Controller.

"Perhaps you could puff to the pond at Fenland. The ducks will like it there," Hiro said.

Percy pumped his pistons and left for Fenland, leaving behind a very happy Hiro. He was the Master of the Railway again, just like in the old days!

Just then, The Fat Controller's car pulled up to the junction.

"Hiro!" he said. "I've heard some worrying news. Farmer McColl is waiting for his ducks, and we can't find the tables, chairs or the audience for the tea-time concert either!"

Hiro gasped. What a muddle he'd made! He was only trying to help!

"I'm sorry, Sir," Hiro said. "I knew you were busy, and I didn't want to bother you. So I told the engines what to do."

"Hiro, nothing is more important to me than my engines being Really Useful," The Fat Controller replied.

"I was wrong, but I will put this right," said Hiro, as he steamed away.

Hiro clickety-clacked along the track until he'd told Edward, Thomas and Percy to go to Knapford straight away. The Fat Controller gave them their orders and everyone puffed happily away.

All except Hiro – The Fat Controller had thought of a special way for Hiro to be Really Useful ... Hiro was to help him in Knapford. Nothing could have made Hiro happier!

★ Creaky Cranky ★

It was an exciting day on Sodor. The Duke and Duchess of Boxford were holding a spring party. At Brendam Docks, Cranky the Crane was busy unloading everything for the party, when Thomas cheerfully chuffed on to the dockside. "It's the Duke and Duchess' party today!" smiled Thomas.

"I don't go to parties," grumbled Cranky. "I'm stuck here."

"You're creaky, Cranky! Is everything too heavy for you?" teased Thomas.

But Cranky wasn't in the mood for jokes.

"You couldn't pull anything heavy, Tiny Thomas! That's why Henry and James have the heavy loads today!" he snapped.

"I'm as strong as any other engine, and I'll prove it!" Thomas told the crane as he puffed off to find James. There was more than enough time to make his delivery later.

Thomas found James at the wash down.

"Shall I deliver your wood and barrels for you?" he asked.

"Then you can get ready for the party."

James thought it was a wonderful idea, and soon Thomas was coupled to his heavy flatbed.

Huffing and puffing, Thomas set off for the Docks.

He dared Cranky to try to lift the flatbed. He was sure the creaky crane wouldn't be able to do it. But Cranky did! Thomas was very cross! He steamed off to find Henry.

Henry was waiting at the coal hopper, so Thomas offered to take his straw bales for him. Henry was delighted.

"Thank you, Thomas!" he smiled.

Thomas huffed hard to get the flatbed back to the Docks, but Cranky managed to lift it up. Thomas was even crosser!

Suddenly, an idea flew into his funnel. "Lift me, Cranky!" he told the big crane.

Cranky didn't want to let Thomas win, so he lowered his hook towards him. As soon as Thomas was safely attached, he started to lift the little engine up.

Then there was trouble! Cranky's crane arm stuttered and stopped! Thomas was stuck in the sky!

The Fat Controller arrived. "You are causing confusion and delay," he told Thomas. "Cranky is broken, and no deliveries have been made for the party."

Thomas was very sorry. He knew it was all his fault, and as soon as the Engineer lowered him back on to the tracks, he set about making things right. He asked strong Spencer to take the wood and straw to the party.

Then Thomas pumped his pistons to collect new parts for Cranky from Victor and Kevin at the Steamworks.

Thomas rushed back to the Docks. Cranky could see that the new parts were heavy, and he was very grateful.

"Thank you, Thomas," he said. "You're not so 'Tiny', after all."

"And you're not 'creaky' either," said Thomas. The two friends smiled at each other. Thomas decided not to go back to the party, after all. He and Cranky had their own party instead!

★ The Lion of Sodor ★

It was a beautiful day, and Thomas was puffing down to Brendam Docks. He had a very special Special to collect! Cranky lowered a wooden crate on to Thomas' flatbed.

"The Mayor is waiting for this at Knapford," he told Thomas.

"It's the Lion of Sodor!"

"I've never carried a real lion before!"

Thomas smiled, as he puffed proudly out of the Docks.

On his way to Knapford, Thomas passed Henry, who was delivering sticky treacle. Thomas asked Henry if he could have some treacle for the lion to eat, and kind Henry agreed. So Henry's Driver poured some treacle into the lion's crate.

"Thank you, Henry!" Thomas called as he puffed away. Next he saw Edward, who happily gave Thomas some of the fresh fish he was carrying for the lion.

"Thank you, Edward!" said Thomas as he started off along the tracks. "I'd better not be late for the Mayor!"

Just outside Knapford, Thomas saw Toby the Tram Engine puffing along his tracks.

He was carrying straw, and both the engines agreed that the lion might like some.

Toby's Driver scattered some straw into the top of the crate, and off Thomas chuffed.

Thomas puffed proudly into Knapford Station. Lots of people and engines had gathered to see the Lion of Sodor.

The workmen carefully opened the crate, and there was a gasp from the crowd.

The Lion of Sodor wasn't a real lion at all! It was a statue, and now it was covered in treacle, fish and straw.

Thomas' cheeks went as red as James!

"I'm sorry," said Thomas. "I thought the lion was real, and wanted to take extra special care of it."

"What a mess!" said The Fat Controller. "And the Mayor is due at tea time!"

"I'll get it clean and shiny again in no time, I promise, Sir!" Thomas puffed as The Fat Controller went back to his car.

Then Henry steamed up next to Thomas. "Why don't you take the lion to the wash down?" he said, kindly.

It was a very good idea, so Thomas pumped his pistons and puffed away as quickly as possible.

Soon the sticky mess was washed off and the Lion of Sodor was clean again. But it still wasn't shiny! So Thomas took it to the Steamworks to be polished.

Afterwards, the statue sparkled in the sun. It was ready to go back to Knapford!

Everyone wanted to see the Lion of Sodor, and as Thomas chuffed through the countryside to Knapford, children and passengers cheered. When Thomas puffed into Knapford Station, the Mayor had just arrived.

"Well done, Thomas," smiled the Mayor. "This is the finest statue I've ever seen."

And Thomas smiled from funnel to footplate!

★ Thomas and the Pigs ★

Thomas loved visiting all the farms on Sodor, but his favourite was Farmer Trotter's pig farm. One day, Farmer Trotter had some exciting news.

"One of my pigs is going to have piglets today," he told Thomas. "Could you collect some soft straw for them from Farmer McColl's Farm?"

Thomas was happy to help. He couldn't wait to see the little piglets! He chuffed cheerfully off along the track to Farmer McColl's Farm.

As he whizzed over the rails, Thomas couldn't stop thinking about the piglets and whether they would like anything other than the straw.

As he puffed past the Dalry, he saw Percy, getting ready to deliver milk.

"May I have some milk for Farmer Trotter's piglets?" Thomas asked him.

Percy laughed. "Of course!" he said, as the milk churns were loaded into Thomas' truck. Thomas chuffed on across Sodor, still thinking about the piglets. James gave him some juicy apples for them at the Orchard, and some children helped him gather shiny brown chestnuts in the woods for them too. Soon, everyone on Sodor was excited about the piglets! At last, Thomas chuffed into Farmer McColl's yard.

"Thomas, you are late," Farmer McColl said. He was not very happy, especially when he looked in Thomas' truck.

"Your truck is full," he said. "There's no room for the piglets' straw!"

Thomas hadn't thought about that!

"I must puff back to Farmer Trotter's farm right now" he said, pumping his pistons as he chuffed quickly away.

When he arrived back at the pig farm, Farmer Trotter wasn't very happy either.

"Piglets need soft straw," the Farmer told Thomas. "They'll be born very soon!"

Thomas felt very silly. He emptied his truck as fast as he could. He had to pick up that straw! He whooshed and wheeshed through the countryside, past Percy, James and the children. They all wanted to know about the piglets.

"Sorry, I can't stop," Thomas peeped back at them.

He picked up the straw and rushed back to Farmer Trotter's farm.

But when Thomas arrived back there, there were no pigs in sight. Thomas was sure he was too late, when a voice came out of the darkness.

"You're just in time, Thomas!"

It was Farmer Trotter. He opened the shed doors, and there lay the mother pig and her piglets.

They were even sweeter than Thomas had thought, and he was even happier when Farmer Trotter told him he had named one of the piglets ... Thomas!

Snow Tracks

It was wintertime on the Island of Sodor, and the tracks were covered in deep snow. The Fat Controller needed some trucks to be taken to Brendam Docks, so he asked Gordon, one of his strongest engines, to take them.

"Snow is slippery, Gordon," The Fat Controller warned him. "Go around hills, not over them."

"Yes, Sir," Gordon replied.

After The Fat Controller had left, Gordon was huffing and puffing with pride.

"I will steam over every hill I come to!" he boasted. "I'm the strongest and the best!"

With that, Gordon wheeshed out of Tidmouth Sheds, leaving all of the other engines behind. Soon, he was chuffing across Sodor, with his smoke grey against the snowy countryside. He sped on to Gordon's Hill, though the snow was getting deeper and deeper. It was very hard work to chuff through the thick snow, but proud Gordon would not admit it.

"Gordon's Hill isn't too steep for me! I shall steam over it!" he tooted, though his wheels were aching already and his boiler felt ready to burst.

Gordon huffed up the steep hill through the thick snow. But instead of being pushed to the side, the snow was piling up in front of him. Soon Gordon was pushing a huge snowball! It grew bigger and bigger until it got so heavy that it started to push Gordon back down the hill.

Just then, Thomas puffed up behind Gordon. He was delivering firewood to the Stationmasters so they wouldn't get cold.

"Watch out, Thomas!" cried Gordon, as he rolled back faster and faster.

Thomas raced off into a siding, but it was too late!

Gordon managed to slide out of the way, but the giant snowball crashed straight into Thomas and his trucks, knocking them off the rails!

Gordon felt terrible.

"This is a disaster!"

he said, sadly. "I'm so sorry, Thomas. I'll try to push you back on to the rails."

But Gordon was too tired from puffing through all the snow. He wasn't strong enough to get his friend back on the tracks.

"I know what to do! Don't worry, Thomas!" Gordon called, and he steamed off down the rails.

When he returned, he brought Rocky with him, who used his strong crane arm to lift Thomas back on to the rails.

"Thank you, Rocky!" Thomas beamed. "Now I must deliver my firewood. The Stationmasters must be very cold by now!"

"I will help you, Thomas," Gordon told him, and together they chuffed off to all the stations on Sodor, and the Docks too. Thomas was very glad to have his friend with him, and Gordon had learnt his lesson – whenever they came to a hill, they puffed around it!
